U.S. Senate Passes Television Decoder Act: The U.S. Senate passed the Television Decoder Circuitry Act of 1990 on August 2 by unanimous consent. The bill requires closed caption decoder circuitry to be installed in all new television sets, 13-inch screen size or larger, sold in the United States by July 1, 1993. This legislation is expected to open up television programming to millions of deaf and hard-of-hearing people and others, at a nominal cost added to the price of each television set. Even though the chips won't be required until 1993, some companies are pushing to get such TV sets on the market before then. One of them is Zenith Electronics Corp, the only remaining independent U.S. manufacturer of television sets. This legislation will finally provide television programming for 24 million deaf and hard-of-hearing people, 27 to 29 million adults with literacy problems, and three to four million immigrants learning English as a second language. Excerpted from Gallaudet University Alumni Newsletter October 1990.

Thanks to you all for another successful book fair held two weeks ago. We made a neat profit of $577.00 and the money will be used to purchase books for the library. Thank you for your continued support.
